

Dealing with stress at work

What gives you stress at work?

工作量过大 — Excessive workloads: too much work to do in a day

截止时间紧张 — Tight deadlines: not enough time to finish your work

薪资低 — Low salary: the money you get is not enough

职业天花板 — Glass ceiling: no chance of getting a better job

缺乏自主权 — Lack of control: you cannot decide things for yourself

工作与生活失衡 — Poor work-life balance: no time for family or your own life

人际冲突 — Interpersonal conflicts: problems with people at work

工作不安全感 — Job insecurity: you are afraid of losing your job

重复性工作 — Repetitive work: doing the same thing every single day

What happens when you feel stressed?

头痛 — Headaches: pain in your head

疲劳 — Fatigue: feeling very tired

焦虑与抑郁 — Anxiety and depression: worried or sad all the time

睡眠障碍 — Sleep problems: sleeping badly

失眠 — Insomnia: not being able to fall asleep

易怒 — Irritability: getting angry easily about small things

消化问题 — Digestive issues: stomach problems

高血压 — High blood pressure: blood pressure too high

食欲改变 — Changes in appetite: eating more or less than usual

重复性劳损 — RSI (repetitive strain injury): pain in arms or hands from doing the same work

肥胖 — Obesity: gaining too much weight

压力性进食 — Stress eating: eating a lot to calm down

How do you cope with stress?

时间管理 — Time management: planning your time well

休息与放松 — Breaks and downtime: taking short breaks

运动 — Exercise: working out or going to the gym

饮食 — Diet: eating healthy food

冥想 — Meditation: sitting quietly to relax

休假 — Taking a holiday: getting away from work for a while

旅行 — Travel: going on a trip

Discussion

People in your team chat still send messages at 10 pm, even after work finishes. How does that make you feel, and what do you do so your phone doesn't stress you out at night?

After a hard day, how do you relax on the way home — music on the metro, a walk, or your favorite takeout? Tell us what you really do.

When you feel stressed at work, what is the first thing you usually do to feel better? Try to describe a real moment.

Mondays can be hard. What is the worst part of Monday morning for you, and what helps you get up and go to work?

Your boss sends you another task just as you're about to leave at 6 pm. What do you say to them, and how do you feel inside?