

Discussion on Study

How You Study Now

1. How many hours a week do you study now? How does that compare with your school days?
2. Are you studying anything at the moment, such as a language or a certificate? What is it?
3. What does a normal study session look like for you: where, when, and for how long?
4. Do you have a fixed study routine, or do you study whenever you find the time?
5. Do you study better in the morning, in the evening, or late at night?
6. How long can you study before you get tired or lose focus, and what do you do then?

Focus and the Study Environment

1. What study environment do you prefer: a library, a café, your own desk, or a quiet room?
2. Can you study with people around you, or do you need complete silence?
3. Do you listen to music while you study? What kind of music helps you focus?
4. What usually breaks your focus — your phone, messages, or something else?
5. Do you use anything to keep yourself on task, like a timer or a 25-minute focus block?
6. What do you do on a day when you cannot concentrate at all?

Methods That Work

1. Which subjects were easy for you to study, and which were very difficult? Why?
2. How do you remember new words or new material: writing it down, repeating it, or using it?
3. Do you make notes, reread the book, or do practice questions? Which works best for you?
4. Do you prefer group study or studying alone? Give a real example from your own experience.
5. Is a teacher necessary for learning? Why or why not?
6. Do you learn better online or in a classroom? What makes the difference?
7. What is something you have taught yourself with no teacher and no class?

Motivation and Hard Work

1. What gives you the motivation to study something new?
2. When you have to study something boring, how do you get yourself started?
3. Have you ever earned a certificate or an award through studying? Was it worth the effort?
4. Have you ever felt exhausted from studying? Can studying be as tiring as physical labor?
5. How do you reward yourself after finishing something difficult?
6. Who is the hardest-working learner you know, and what can you learn from them?

Exams and Pressure

1. How do you study for a test: a little every day, or everything in one night?
2. Have you ever pulled an all-nighter to finish studying? How did you feel the next day?
3. Do you keep your old notes and textbooks, or throw them away after the exam?
4. Is there something you learned for a test and forgot the week after?
5. Do certificates and test scores really show how good someone is at something?

Time, Skills and Mastery

1. How many years do you have to study something before you are an expert at it?
2. What are the three most important subjects to study, and why?
3. What is a skill you would like to study properly one day, and why?
4. Is there something you learned slowly at first but got much better at?
5. Do you think anyone can learn anything, or does talent matter more?

Learning in the Future

1. What are the elderly and the young learning now? What can they learn from each other?
2. Would you like to study overseas? Where would you go, and what would you study?
3. What kinds of things will be important to study in the next ten years?
4. How is technology, like AI, changing the way students learn?
5. If you learned something new next year, how would you use AI to help you?
