Email Discussion

Everyday Email

1. How often do you check your email — hourly, daily, or rarely?
2. Do you read email on your phone or on a computer? Which is easier?
3. Do you keep one email address for work and another for yourself?
4. Have you ever paid for extra storage or security for your email?
5. What is the first email you open in the morning?
6. Do you answer emails right away, or leave them for later?
7. How many unread emails are sitting in your inbox right now?

Managing the Inbox

1. How do you organize your inbox — folders, labels, or nothing at all?
2. What do you do when your inbox has 200 unread emails?
3. How long does it take you to write an important email?
4. Do you use templates for emails you send again and again?
5. How do you deal with spam and emails you never asked for?
6. Do you delete emails, archive them, or just let them pile up?
7. Have you ever missed something important in a crowded inbox?

Messages That Matter

1. Do you prefer email or WeChat for work? Why?
2. Which emails do you open and answer first? How do you decide?
3. How do you write an email that is professional but still friendly?
4. Do you prefer short emails or long, detailed ones?
5. Should you answer work email at night or on the weekend?

6. Do you get annoyed when someone replies only "OK" to a long email?

7. Why is email still so important in the workplace?

Writing Well

1. What makes an email easy to answer? What makes it annoying?

2. Do you re-read an important email before you send it?

3. Have you ever sent an email to the wrong person? What happened?

4. Is it okay to use emojis in a work email? When?

5. How do you politely ask someone to reply faster?

6. What is a good subject line for a meeting request?

Problems

1. Have you ever been in a chain of 30 emails about one small thing?

2. Do you use "reply all" a lot, or only when you must?

3. What do you do when an email is confusing or badly written?

4. Have you ever written an angry email, then deleted it?

5. What is the worst work-email mistake you have heard of?

6. How do you follow up when someone never replies?

7. Would you rather call a person or send an email about a problem?

Email and Me

1. Do you feel stressed when your inbox fills up? Why?

2. Could you go one whole day without checking email?

3. Is email making people lazier at talking face to face?

4. What email habit of yours would you like to change?

5. Do you keep old emails, or clean them out often?

6. If email disappeared tomorrow, what would you use instead?
